Upgraded elementary accreditation urged

Bay School District inspection report calls for auditorium, music facilities

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Construction of an auditorium and music program classrooms at Bay Senior High School are among primary recommendations of a five-year interim state and Southern Association of Colleges and Schools team which inspected all Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District schools in December.

Recommendations and comments resulting from the inspection were not revealed until just a few days ago when The Sea Coast Echo requested to view the reports apparently completed in February.

The interim inspections are conducted five years after districtwide 10-year inspections which determine state accreditation ratings and Southern Association accreditation if requested by district officials.

The Visiting Committee which conducted the recent inspection consisted of Dr. Joe Holloway of the University of Southern Mississippi at Gulf Park in Long Beach; Vernon Ehlers of Long Beach, John Long of Gulfport and Sharon Lembright of Pass Christian, all of Municipal Separate School Districts in those cities; and Helen Mestayer of Hancock County School District.

Visiting Committee recommendations are apparently based on suggestions by a 1976 accreditation inspection group.

is a comprehensive list of school policies distributed to all segments of the district, an art instructor, scheduled music classes as opposed to the present system where this instruction is offered the same time as other extracurricular activities, additional biology laboratory equipment, more electives such as American government and economics, a guidance plan and a curriculum specialist.

Rooms for band, piano and chorus instruction are also recommended by the committee, but J.D. McCullough, superintendent of education, reports a bond issue is necessary for such a project.

Other facilities recommended by the inspection team include a track field and covered assembly areas for Waveland and North Bay Elementary Schools.

McCullough says none of the deficiencies cited in the inspection will jeopardize present accreditation ratings for Bay schools.

All district schools have AA (the highest) state accreditation and all with the exception of the elementary schools are accredited by the Southern Association, the superintendent reports.

McCullough has said in the past that Southern Association accreditation has not been requested for the elementary schools because the organization forbids varsity-type competitive sports in grades one through six.

However the visiting committee recommends in their reports that higher accreditation (SACS) be secured for the elementary schools.

A written reporting system for bus repairs is recommended by the committee for all schools, but the suggestion was considered and rejected by school administrators due to the time factor involved.

McCullough explained the bus report system was discussed with school administrators and they decided the procedure was "not feasible."

Improvements in student health care service facilities are recommended at just about all district schools.

Also recommended at the high school

Parent-Teacher Organizations at both North Bay and Waveland Elementary affiliate with state and national PTO organizations. A reply to that recommendation states "considered and rejected."

Additional North Bay recommendations call for a certified media specialist; and classrooms for special reading, speech and music programs.

Other suggestions for Waveland Elementary include improving science classroom facilities with the installation of a water system and allowing students to check out more books at one time than presently allowed by the librarian. Both of those suggestions were also rejected by local educators.

Bus emergency evacuation drills are recommended for the Waveland school students.

The district's expanded special education program and Accountability and Instructional Management Program solved most 1976 deficiencies found in the district's education programs.

At Bay American Legion pier:

Wharf construction, dredging project ok'd

By BRENT MACEY

The Mississippi Commission on Wildlife Conservation ruled Tuesday to allow dredging and construction of a boat dock at the American Legion Pier in Bay St. Louis.

Larry Lewis, a scientist with the Bureau of Marine Resources in Long Beach, stated the commission's approval is "one step in a three step process."

Lewis said the Bureau of Pollution Control must issue a water quality certification and the United States Corps of Engineers must also grant a permit before construction can begin.

According to Diane Hunt, wetlands investigator with the bureau, the application approved by the commission requests permission to dredge an area 150 feet along the north side of the newly-constructed breakwater to a depth of four feet at mean tide.

Construction of a 40-foot wharf along the west side of the American Legion jetty was also approved.

Hancock County Beat 4 Supervisor Sam Pernicaro stated the wharf project will be undertaken by the American Legion Post 139, of which he is a member.

The American Legion Post may bid the job out once all the permits have been obtained, he stated.

He noted his county crew will undertake the dredging project.

Pernicaro said the wharf will be opened to the boating public and can be used by anyone who may want to unload gear before trailering a boat from the water.

Permanent docking will not be allowed, he said.

Also at the commission meeting Tuesday, the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission was granted a variance permit allowing an entrance channel to Port Bienville to be dredged to a depth of 18 feet.

Chris Synder, with the bureau, stated the channel will connect with the Intracoastal Waterway.

He noted the variance permit was needed because the commission normally requires that channels intersecting waterways be dredged to a depth not exceeding the waterway's depth.

In this case, the waterway is some 12 feet deep and the channel is requested to be dredged 18 feet deep.

In other action, the commission granted Thomas L. Matthews of Tom's Bayou LaCroix Marina a live bait dealership license.

Hancock's world acclaim hoped in groundbreaking for $5.6 million facility

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

Bay St. Louis and Hancock County will hopefully become a well known ocean research center when the Naval Ocean Research and Development Activity's $5.6 million laboratory at the National Space Technology Laboratories is completed. Rear Adm. L.S. Kollmorgen of Washington, D.C., chief of Naval research, said at Friday groundbreaking ceremonies for the new facility.

Kollmorgen remarks about the new NORDA facility now under construction were offered just before he and several other dignitaries turned over the first official shovel-fulls of dirt marking the beginning of the building project scheduled to be completed in April, 1984.

Some 75 people consisting of area political officials, NSTL department heads and personnel, and news media representatives gathered late Friday morning in sweltering summer heat under a tent erected especially for the occasion on Road B near the construction site.

Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi was scheduled to speak at the event, but reportedly could not attend due to his work schedule in Washington, D.C.

Kollmorgen stated, "The new laboratory represents the Navy's continuous commitment to oceanographic research and quest to learn more about the ocean environment and how to use it to an advantage in Naval operations."

He reported ongoing Naval ocean science research has helped to improve the United States' underwater weapons and sensor systems.

"...parameters which could not be measured in previous years because of lack of technology may be of critical import to future Naval operations," he noted.

The research chief explained research has revealed the Earth's oceans consist of weather patterns similar to atmospheric weather.

He said sharp underwater temperature changes can create acoustic shadows which can obscure a submerged object from sonar detection.

Kollmorgen hopes the Navy can learn through research how to predict and exploit these temperature phenomena on a global scale.

In explaining NORDA's growth since its "controversial" inception in 1978, Kollmorgen reported personnel has been increased 50 percent and government funding has doubled to a figure of $40 million annually.

Capt. G.T. (Tom) Phelps, commander of NORDA at NSTL, said the 62,000-square-foot Ocean Sciences and Technology Laboratory under construction in Hancock was approved by the Navy in 1979 following a request for the facility in Sept. 1978.

He reported the multi-million-dollar research and engineering facility could be completed earlier than the projected April 1984 date.

The Navy laboratory facility was designed by Barlow and Plumkett, a Jackson architectural and engineering firm.

Building the facility is Tilley Constructors and Engineers of Gulfport.

Dr. James E. Andrews, NORDA technical director at NSTL, introduced several local officials at the event which included Mayor Larry Bennett and Police Chief Douglas Williams of Bay St. Louis.

No Hancock County or Waveland officials attended the event.

Andrews said the laboratory person-

Beach Road paving, to begin shortly

By BRENT MACEY

Three members of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors met Friday with the county engineer and a representative of the Bureau of Marine Resources to discuss what areas of Beach Boulevard should be paved.

Some $70,000 is available for paving, according to Larry Seal, county engineer with the engineering firm of Broadway and Seal of Picayune.

He estimated some two miles of the 13.2 mile road can be surfaced with asphalt some one-and-one-half inches thick.

The estimated $70,000 is the amount of money remaining from a total of $312,000 made available through a $260,000 federal Coastal Energy Impact Fund grant and $57,000 of county matching money.

Most of the curbing is now skip curbing—a type of curbing which Seal claims will resist earth from eroding under Beach Boulevard.

At the beginning of the project Seal claimed the areas which did not contain skip curbing were the worst areas on the road. He said the old type of curbing allowed water to seep under the road and erode base material.

According to Seal some 2,316 square yards of six-inch side walk and 1,530 linear feet of curbing have been replaced.

Other work included removal of 26 yards of concrete pavement, 45 square yards of asphalt paving, 1,000 linear feet of side walk, and removal of 2,000 linear feet of concrete curb, gutter and filter block.

Seal stated 337 holes were drilled so areas could be pressure grouted—a process where cement is pumped in under the road to fill in spaces hollowed out from erosion.

They requested Seal use the remaining money to pave the worst sections of the road.

Seal estimated work could begin within two weeks.

He said he thought Southland Enterprises of Gulfport, the company contracted to repair the road, would sub-contract the paving job.

Public absent from Bay revenue sharing hearing

By MARY MACKEY

No one attended a Bay St. Louis revenue sharing hearing scheduled Tuesday in City Hall.

The meeting was designed to hear public input on how the city should spend some $122,355 in revenue sharing money.

City Clerk Eddie Favre noted the city received $100,555 in revenue sharing money this year.

That amount was combined with $3,500 in interest plus $13,800 remaining from revenue sharing money left over from last year.

The final 1982-83 budget has not been approved by the council this year.

However, some $111,555 of the total revenue sharing money has been earmarked.

Favre noted $60,000 has been earmarked for a capital outlay in public works and is budgeted for any major street work or drainage work the city wishes undertaken during the remainder of the year.

Some $11,000 is earmarked to pay part of a yearly service contract with Gulf Coast Waste and Disposal.

The police department has been budgeted $6,000 of the revenue sharing funds to purchase two used police cars from the State Highway Patrol, Favre said.

Also $1,500 is budgeted to cover the cost of an audit on revenue sharing money.

"Revenue sharing requires an audit every three years and this is the third year," Favre said.

An additional $11,155 has not been designated for any special purpose.

Favre noted the meeting was the second hearing on public revenue sharing money.

"The next step will be for the council to accept or reject the budget," he said.

Chamber sponsoring candidates forum

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a political forum Tuesday, Aug. 31, at 7 p.m. in the Annunciation School gymnasium in Kiln.

Purpose of the forum is to afford voters an opportunity to hear candidates running for superintendent of education in the Hancock County School District. A special election has been set for September 11 to fill the post recently vacated by Billy Sills who pled guilty to a felony in connection with the operations of his office.

Questions will be accepted from the audience, but must be presented in written form at the door or to the moderator. A committee composed of three persons will screen all questions to avoid duplication.

Candidates will be allowed a certain amount of time to answer each question, and as many questions will be answered as time permits.

The public is invited to attend.

Navy band livens NSTL krewe opener

NSTL's Mardi Gras Krewe recently "kicked-off" to a different drummer — the U.S. Navy Steel Band.

With hands clapping and feet stomping among the 300 guests at the Cypress House Pavilion, the event was termed a "real success" by President Patricia Johnson, Navy Oceanographic Office.

The only military steel band in the world, the group builds its own instruments out of 55 gallon oil drums. Nine "drums" are required to make a full range of notes. From Calypso to the William Tell Overture — the entertainers held their audience.

Helping make the event possible and lending support were NSTL contractors Robert G. Allen, Computer Sciences Corporation; A. B. Gorham Jr., Pass American World Airways; and William A. Tate, Williams Wrecking Company.

The "Kick-Off Luncheon" was held to help the NSTL Mardi Gras Krewe with their first float to be used in local area parades. The Krewe is open to all employees of both agencies and contractors located at NSTL.

Bits 'n pieces

Many folks are anxious for the sound of the whistles opening the 1982 area high schools football season.

Members of the respective teams have been practicing in preparations for the big opening games the first Friday of September.

We know the weather is a little too warm to think about attending a football game, but think about the persons who are practicing.

We hope all of the schools will have a good season, of course we know not every team can be a winner.

The thing which always amazes us is how some coaches will tell you in pre-season how they have a young unexperienced team and at the end of the season they sit on top of the heap.

We will have to just wait and see if it will be the Tigers, Hawks, Rock-A-Chaws or Pirates on top this year.

It is a little noisy on Main Street with the beginning of the construction for much needed improvements.

The weather has been good so far and we hope it will continue for a few more weeks,

We know many people are being inconvenienced by the blocking of Main Street, but it is a necessary to perform the construction.

We hope the job will be completed as soon as possible.

Citizens urged to contact Bay councilmen on tax department consolidation issue

Sea Coast Echo
Court Street
Bay St. Louis

To The Editor:

When the present form of government was established for our city five years ago, the citizens were to benefit through better representation - each district having its own representative and one at large.

The recent editorial in the Sun Herald, and several letters to the editor in the Sea Coast Echo, combined with citizen opinion have showed me that our mayor and at least two of the councilmen have lost sight of their responsibility to the public.

The merger of the tax departments can save the taxpayers of the City of Bay St. Louis $41,000 per year.

With inflation, in ten years we would save half-million dollars. Not only would we save $41,000 a year, it would be more convenient to pay in one place. Taxpayers could then avoid the risk of neglecting to pay their county or city taxes and losing property through a tax sale.

We all know people who were turned away from the polls because they did not register at both City Hall and Court House. Isn't it tragic that people have lost property for making a similar mistake with tax departments.

As a taxpaying citizen of this community, I think it's time to stand up and be heard. Call your councilman now to demand a public meeting with the people they represent. Don't forget the councilman-at-large. He's supposed to represent all of us.

Here are the councilmen and their phone numbers:

Ward One - Gary Eugene Taylor, 467-2609; Ward Two - James Thriffiley, 467-4138; Ward Three - Harry Farve, 467-2625; Ward Four - Sheldon Seuzeneau, 467-4698; and At Large - Wilmer Seymour, 467-6049.

Hancock's young boxers deserve same enthusiastic support afforded other athletes

Echo
Bay St. Louis
Aug. 20, 1982

To The Editor:

There are various sports activities that the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland support. All local sports need support from the community, not just the ones that the officials of this town support.

But there is one sport that raises no response when it comes to helping out. Boxing is a tough sport and is not backed by the local officials or businesses.

This is strictly a non-profit organization, but funds are needed to buy new equipment as the old equipment is barely usable. It is also necessary to transport the boys to their matches weekly, along the Coast and into Louisiana and Alabama.

"This sport is for the young men of this area from 10-25. Their training is vigorous but they are willing to come to the gym daily for three hours and run about five miles per day. This sport keeps these boys off the street and out of trouble. But yet they receive no support from their own cities.

These boys represent this area and we should be proud of them, win or lose.

Congratulations to these boys, maybe their townspersons will sit up and take notice and not shut the door when asked for donations for this sport that helps with the mind and body.

These boys are our future adult citizens, let's support these young people and show them sportsmanship and how to get along with their peers.

They need extra support from the local community.

'Who you know' important element in teacher-student assignment system

Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Editor:

Well, school has started once again, and once again the politics in our school system is enough to make a person physically ill.

I am sick and tired of children whose parents are connected with the school system getting their choice of teachers when school starts each year.

It is so terribly unfair. Let's face it, all teachers are not equal, and in each grade there is usually one teacher better than the others.

I don't think it is right for these teachers to be hand-picked for some children while other children are stuck with what they get because their parents don't work for the school system or know anyone who does.

Now I'm not saying this holds true for everyone in the system, some of them still believe in fairness, but some have never heard the word.

If any one of the candidates for superintendent of education thinks he has a way to get the politics out of our school system, then I wish he would let me know.

If not, I don't think I will bother to go to the polls; I'd rather stay home and wash my windows — they need cleaning too.

Waveland Junior Players display enthusiasm, talent, poise in first season performances

Letter to the Editor
The Sea Coast Echo

Dear Sir,

I am writing in reference to Ellis Cheval's mention of the Waveland Junior Players first performances last month.

As I was fortunate enough to be a member of the audience on the second Saturday night, I can also attest to the "enthusiasm" that was so obvious. But more than that was the talent and poise those youngsters displayed!

That, and the dedication that was so apparent on the parts of Dottie Overal, Jeanne-Marie Bell, and the other adults who assisted the Junior Players, made the evening a delight.

I look forward to the bigger and better offerings Jeanne-Marie has promised for us next summer.

Sincerely yours,

Reappraisal without property classification will shift tax burden to fixed-income owners

Dear Editor:

A resolution against reappraising unclassified property passed unanimously by the county supervisors of Mississippi at their annual convention.

We believe classification of property is probably one of the most important issues to ever appear on the ballot in Mississippi. We believe that without this amendment the tax burden will shift drastically to the homeowner and even more to the homeowner over 65 years-old who can least afford an increase in taxes.

Please encourage your readers to investigate this amendment thoroughly and then to decide for themselves how to vote.

We believe that after a complete examination of the voters of Mississippi will vote "yes" for classification on the November ballot.

Sincerely,
Jimmie Kirkpatrick,

Hancock County Jail provides atmosphere in which human dignity is totally meaningless

Editor
Sea Coast Echo

Dear Mr. Cuevas,

For a moment try to picture this scene — you have a jail cell 8' by 18' (approximately 144 sq. ft.) — in it you have a shower 3' X 3' and 4 bunk beds (sleeps 8 people) and into the cell you put 15 men (ages 18-50, with charges ranging from DUI to murder).

Keep in mind all these men must live in the space of this cell — they must sleep, eat, bathe and, if they have visitors, must visit at the cell door for the one hour a week they are permitted visitors.

Some of them are in these conditions for six or eight months waiting for a trial.

The cell you are to picture is in a jail over 60 years-old with exposed plumbing and wiring — it rains through the broken windows on the men as they sleep on the floor. There is no heat in the winter or ventilation in the summer.

Sometimes at night when the floor is covered with human bodies laying in puddles of sweat, the police will bring in a drunk who will, during the night, get sick and throw up on someone laying next to him on the floor.

It sounds like the kind of hell-hole you would expect to find in the Middle East, maybe Iran or Central America. Surely, this could only happen in a place where human life is of little value and human dignity is totally meaningless.

Wrong! The scene I just described is right across the street from you — in the Hancock County Jail.

If the people of Hancock County want "Law and Order" they must abandon the notion they can get something for nothing.

At best, criminal justice is expensive — not to have it is even more expensive.

The taxpayers need to build a new jail. It's the cheapest way out.

Sheriff Peterson does an excellent job with what he has to work with. The problem is clearly a lack of money. Look at how many people have escaped. I'm surprised there are not more.

There is not even a jailor on duty at night on the weekends — only a woman dispatcher. If an inmate was hurt, or sick at such times he could not get any kind of help. This place is dangerous to both the inmates and the people who work here.

Since I've been in jail I've spent over a week sleeping on the floor and I have been robbed of what money I had in the cell with me.

Jails, at best, are not a very effective solution to the problem of crime. This jail is not only not a solution but is a problem within itself.

Respectfully yours,
Bob Stewart

Oklahoma man arrested

An Oklahoma man, apparently hitchhiking through Waveland, was arrested Sunday night after a routine computer check revealed he was wanted in Texas.

Raymond L. Tiller, 22, of Claremore, Okla., was stopped by a patrolman as he was walking along US 90.

Information from the National Crime Information Center revealed that he was wanted for burglary and parole violations by the McKinney, Texas, Sheriff's Department.

Tiller has waived extradition proceedings.

Foundation grant aids Wildlife Federation fight against ocean dumping

The National Wildlife Federation has been awarded a $125,000 grant from the William H. Donner Foundation to strengthen the Federation's efforts to discourage the use of the oceans as dumping grounds for harmful wastes.

The project will work to maintain strong federal regulations for ocean dumping, and will seek out environmentally-sound alternatives to the disposal of sewage sludge and dredge spoils.

Dumping of dredged material, sewage sludge and industrial chemicals continues to threaten the well-being of our oceans," said Dr. Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the NWF.

"Without the help of the Donner Foundation, the NWF wouldn't have the resources to effectively defend these valuable ecosystems. But this grant takes on a much greater significance: If we're successful in alerting the general public to the dangers of ocean dumping, this program will become a landmark in the ongoing effort to save our oceans."

Having reached the 10-year anniversary — April 23 — of federal ocean dumping regulations, it is particularly appropriate for NWF to reduce its efforts along these lines."

The new program, which is initially funded for two years, will "aggressively fight" current efforts of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to relax its ocean dumping regulations, said Ken Kamlet, director of the Federation's Pollution and Toxics Division.

Two basic principles will be promoted under the project, he said — the vulnerability of oceans to excessive waste disposal and the need for legislative protection of marine resources.

"Oceans are perceived as a 'free' resource, and as such, they're not subject to market place or political protections," said Kamlet. "Consequently, there's a critical need for strong regulation."

The NWF, the nation's largest citizens conservation organization, has long been involved in efforts to preserve natural resources. Although ocean dumping is not a new issue for the NWF, the grant will help the Federation significantly expand its efforts to protect the world's oceans.

Among the Federation's past successes in the ocean dumping field have been: securing the phase-out of sewage sludge ocean dumping by the city of Philadelphia in 1980; bringing-at-sea incineration of toxic chemical wastes under EPA ocean dumping regulation; and obtaining strengthening changes in EPA's nationwide regulations to ensure careful screening of wastes before they are allowed into the ocean.

The director of the ocean dumping project is Tom Bick, a 34-year-old lawyer and former special assistant to the administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Urban Policy Report available

The 1982 National Urban Policy Report, the latest in a series prepared every two years by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development at the request of Congress, is now available to the public from the Superintendent of Documents.

When HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr., sent the report to Congress on July 9, he pointed out that the foundation for the Administration's urban policy is the Economic Recovery Program.

"If cities are to prosper," he said, "our economy must be healthy and vital. Stabilizing and revitalizing our national economy is the single most important task we have in carrying out a Federal urban policy in the 1980's."

The 187-page report sets out urban policy priorities which include, in addition to the emphasis on economic growth, the role of local leaders in strengthening their communities and the creation of experimental enterprise zones in distressed inner cities.

In releasing the document Secretary Pierce said, "The Administration views its urban policy as an evolving one which would achieve a better balance of resources and responsibilities among the Federal, State and local governments."

The President's National Urban Policy Report (order number 023-000-00097-9) may be purchased for $5.50 a copy from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Psychological aspects of emergency services is workshop topic

Psychological aspects of emergency medical services will be discussed at a workshop Thursday, Aug. 26, 6:30 p.m. at the Gulfport Chamber of Commerce Building, 1401 20th Avenue, sponsored by the Mississippi Gulf Coast Emergency Medical Services District.

meeting patient's empathetic and human needs, according to Becky Farnham, project director.

Robbins has an extensive background in mental health, having worked at Gulf Coast Mental Health Center as criminal justice liaison with the Harrison County Sheriff's Department.

Continuing education points will be awarded for National Registry of EMT's toward recertification.

National Weather Service report

Mississippi farmers can look forward to near normal temperatures and precipitation for the next 30 days. The National Weather Service reports temperatures usually begin their fall descent during mid August as average daily highs fall from the low 90s in August to the upper 80s by mid September. Average daily lows will decline from near 70s to the mid 60s.

Precipitation will average three inches for much of the state, with rainfall expected one day in four.

Rainfall may be above normal for the southeast part of the state, with areas near the coast averaging up to six inches.

Chances of rainfall and four rain days in ten.

Overall, weather patterns are expected to be typical for the next month, meaning plenty of warm, humid conditions. Scattered thunderstorms are most likely to form during the afternoon.

Federal agency tracking Gulf shrimp via satellite

The National Marine Fisheries Service at NASA's National Space Technology Laboratories in Hancock County is using a space-age communications system to help Gulf of Mexico fishermen, fishing associations and fishery-managers.

NMFS offers to the public at no charge periodic information on fisheries conditions such as the location, size and quantities of shrimp in the northern Gulf.

The type of information offered depends on the location and activity of the NMFS research vessels.

The satellite system, which was developed by NASA at NSTL, is used by NMFS in conjunction with the "classic" method of fisheries assessment.

NMFS officials report that the public response has been "overwhelming" since the program began June 1 and that the system has already resulted in two major findings regarding the fisheries environment.

In May, the 170-foot NMFS research vessel Oregon II was outfitted with a transmitter developed by NASA for a pilot program to relay medical data from an ambulance in a remote area to a hospital.

Now the equipment is being used to send data from the vessel via the Applications Technology Satellite-3 to the NMFS receiving station at NSTL and then on to the public.

To date more than 200 requests for the information have been received.

The program and its success exemplify NSTL's multi-agency concept and NASA's spirit of cooperation," according to Walt Gandy, NMFS Engineering Research and Development Division chief.

"Here is a prime example of housing within one installation a number of different agencies that have diversified talents and technology that we can all share."

NASA's primary missions at NSTL are supporting the Space Shuttle Main Engine and Main Propulsion System test programs and conducting research and development in space technology applications. NASA-NSTL is also host to 17 federal and state agencies and the Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission where they are distributed to the public.

For a number of years, NMFS vessels have been collecting data in the "classic" way of assessing fisheries," Gandy noted. The agency has sampling stations throughout the Gulf, south Atlantic Ocean and Caribbean Sea.

At each station the crew samples fish with trawls and other gear, catalogs the catch and measures environmental elements such as water temperature, salinity and nutrient level.

From this information, which is reported to the NMFS Pascagoula laboratory, analysts "infer how the marine resources are faring, teeming shrimp in the Gulf," said

Gandy. "At that time most of the shrimp were still in estuaries."

Later, according to Gandy, the investigators discovered a "large band of low-oxygen water adjacent to the Louisiana coast which could have a fairly significant impact on the fisheries, especially during the offshore migration period of shrimp." Other research vessels were expected to investigate the area further.

Gandy said that the most recent NMFS cruise was focused on shrimp but that other cruises will cover all major fisheries.

Bailey, Henrie, Powell attend Coast BPW meet

Donald T. Sullivan, a former FBI agent and member of Governor William Winter's staff, told coastal Business & Professional Women members Sunday that improved education is the key to Mississippi's future.

To support and defend the Governor's proposal to build a trust fund to improve Mississippi economically, Sullivan said Mississippi:

—has the highest teenage dropout rate in schools because of pregnancy.

—has the highest dropout rate in schools in the nation.

—has a very high illiteracy rate.

—has many illiterate and untrained young people who go on to prison (50% at Parchman are functional illiterate).

—has a high percentage of students who repeat the first grade (it is the first and only time many of these young people have seen a book).

—is losing teachers to neighboring states who pay higher wages.

—lacks a compulsory education law.

—has no public kindergarten program (Mississippi is the only state that doesn't have public kindergartens).

—about 59 out of every 100 do not finish high school.

The trust fund, explained Sullivan, will be financed by raising the severance tax from 6% to 9%.

The speaker noted that our young people deserve a better break and future.

Governor Winter is diligently pursuing the efforts set by his predecessors to seek new industry for Mississippi. According to Sullivan we don't have enough industry to give us a good tax base.

To counter the situation, the Governor has launched an educational reform to replace the Board of Education with a Lay Board of Education consisting of nine members. The board will be appointed by the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, and the Speaker of the House. All appointments would be with the advice and consent of the Senate.

all clubs to coordinate the Woman of Achievement program.

Susan Stanford of Ocean Springs, a finalist in the speakoff at the recent national convention, announced she will teach the IDP course to clubs in District II.

District director Mrs. Margaret Kinberg of Gulfport appointed Dolores Kennell of Long Beach as expansion chairman for the district.

Other members participating in the program included Jane Lassiter and Violet Riley of Long Beach, Marjorie Wagstaff of Biloxi, Myrtle Porter of Picayune, Brenda Bailey of Bay Waveland, and Betty DuRocher of Biloxi.

It was announced the fall board meeting will be in Jackson Nov. 12-14, and that Ocean Springs will host the next district meeting.

Representatives of the Bay Waveland BPW Club attending the meeting included Brenda Bailey, Vickie Powell, and Linda Henrie.

THE ABUNDANT LIFE

Just come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly — John 10:10

By Shawn Murphy
MINISTER, BAY ST. LOUIS CHURCH OF CHRIST

A few years ago your writer read about the death of the 'original' Hatfield, the last 'original' Hatfield involved in the notorious feud back in the years of 1880-1890's.

Your writer thought then as he filed that clipping about the peace that Jesus brings not just to stormy Galilee but to our daily lives.

I did not know that in less than two months I would participate in a meeting at a mountain community near where the Hatfields lived, married, and even killed many McCoys.

As we traveled through the foothills of eastern Kentucky toward Beech Creek, W. Va., little did we know what adventure was ahead.

The shoulder was about two feet wide and then plunged nearly 200 feet straight down.

We passed through old communities that a generation ago had been thriving coal mining towns. Now only a remnant kept them from being ghost towns.

It was like something out of Hollywood. The main difference was the people were 'real' and their need is 'real.'

In August 1882 began the bloodiest family-feud known in American history. On election day in 1882 three of Randolph McCoy's sons stabbed Ellison Hatfield (brother of Devil Anse and uncle to Willis) 25 times and then for good measure shot him.

Two days later Ellison died. The three McCoy boys were captured by Devil Anse Hatfield and some of his boys.

After Ellison died Devil Anse, his friends and boys took the McCoy boys across the Tug River and tied them to some pawpaw bushes.

They were told to pray for they were going to be killed. Two were shot to death.

The youngest McCoy boy was trying and beginning not to be killed. Tradition has it that Devil Anse was inclined to kill him but Jim Vance (an in-law) shot the lad.

the two, thus making peace, and in this one body to reconcile both of them to God through the cross, by which he put to death their hostility.

—(Ephesians 2:15-16)

The Hatfield-McCoy feud had been like a fairy tale. But to converse with kinfolks of the Hatfields and to talk with people who knew some of the participants made it come to life in living color.

However, today this hatred is not evident in the descendants. You can go to Matewan and buy a new Ford at the Hatfield/McCoy dealership.

The hatred has subsided with the passing of time. The battle is over and human peace exists.

I could not help but think about and glory in the true peace that our great God brings about as man is reconciled to man in Christ.

—(Romans 5:1)

Yes, the 'original' Hatfields and McCoys have walked across the pages of history and have stepped into eternity. Yet there are so many others who are not at peace with God and who do not enjoy the 'abundant life' that Jesus offers.

However, your writer had the privilege of sharing the gospel with Jimmie Hatfield, the grandson of Devil Anse, and seeing him along with twelve other precious 'mountain folks' make peace with God through confessing Jesus as Lord and being baptized into Christ! Praise the Lord!

Knight's notes

By PETER SCIARRA
We regret to announce the passing of Lewis Hemler who served as district deputy until this past summer.

Lewis was an avid supporter of and believer in the Knights of Columbus. He often visited Pere Le Duc Council and encouraged us to follow the principles of the organization.

He expressed a great faith in the men of the council and strongly believed that the council would be a leader in the church and community.

Lewis was also a kind and gentle man who epitomized the spirit of fraternity that is so important to the Knights. We enjoyed talking with him after the meetings and occasions when he was our guest.

We last spoke with Lewis at the last council meeting he attended as district deputy.

He spoke of how he enjoyed his visits to our council and continued to express his wishes for our success.

We extend our deepest sympathy to the Hemler family. We at Pere Le Duc shall sorely miss him.

Deputy Grand Knight Mel Estrade has been appointed council program director.

Estrade has been conferring with Grand Knight Bob Hub-hard about the selection of the program chairmen and hopes to announce the appointments at our next meeting in September.

Estrade foresees a fruitful and eventful year for the congress, but he states, "Much of the council's success lies with its members who must be willing to see their council active and prosperous. The programs we will initiate depend strongly on the support of all Knights. The programs are relatively simple, so we are hoping for a wonderful turnout of members willing and able to participate."

An important session for the executive officers of the Home Building Association has been called for Monday, Aug. 24 at 8 p.m.

WE CAN'T AFFORD TO BE SHORT-SIGHTED ABOUT ELECTRIC POWER.

Y our calendar says it's 1982. But ours is turned to 1992. Maybe even later.

To supply reliable and adequate electric power for our customers throughout southeast Mississippi, we must constantly modernize facilities and plan for new ones. For example, it takes a full 10 years to design and build a new coal-fired generating plant, about 3 years for a transmission line, or 2 years for a distribution substation. So we must plan five, ten, even fifteen years ahead.

The decision made by Mississippi Power Company some 20 years ago to move from oil and natural gas to coal-based generation shows the advantages of foresight over hindsight. During the decade of the seventies and into the eighties, the use of coal helped keep the cost of our service much lower than if Mississippi Power Company had continued to depend on oil and natural gas as primary boiler fuel. Today, about 90 percent of the company's generation comes from coal—America's least expensive fossil fuel.

That same kind of farsighted planning is needed today.

Planning and building for tomorrow's energy needs will require millions of dollars in new capital. In order to attract this new investment, Mississippi Power Company must have a record of steady financial strength and dependability; its earnings must be as attractive to investors as those of other businesses. That's one reason why we must seek timely and fair rate increases.

Look at it this way: Mississippi Power Company is working today so that our customers can be assured of a reliable supply of electricity tomorrow.

MISSISSIPPI'S OWN—Mississippi's own country music superstar Charley Pride is the headliner on a rebroadcast of "Austin City Limits" at 8 p.m., Saturday, August 28, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

'Same day' surgery cuts hospital bills

Ambulatory Surgery. These two words will probably gain more attention in the future as government, private insurers and consumers search for answers to the spiraling health cost riddle.

The concept behind ambulatory surgery—defined as a surgical procedure, without overnight hospitalization—is simple: reduce the cost of the most expensive single element in health care, the hospital stay.

National figures show an average hospital stay costs approximately $2,120 last year, or roughly $300 per day. In other words, 40 cents out of every health care dollar went directly to the hospital.

And now, some experts say, one out of every three patients spend in a hospital is considered unnecessary—not the care, but the cost of occupying a hospital bed.

By current estimates, approximately 140 surgical procedures now performed in hospitals could be completed the same day, without hospitalization.

The New England Journal of Medicine reports that up to 40 percent of all inpatient surgery could be conducted on an outpatient basis in a hospital, "free standing" surgical center or physician's office.

In addition, ambulatory charges were 55 percent lower than charges for hospital inpatients," the journal said.

Operative procedures in areas such as ear, nose and throat, eye, gynecology, neurosurgical, oral, orthopedic, urological and general surgery, are prime targets for same-day operations.

In 1980, the American College of Surgeons (ASC) supported ambulatory procedures, as long as certain requirements are met.

Checklist urged on moving day

Moving can be an exciting experience for those expecting a fresh start, a new home, new neighbors and new surroundings.

"Moving can also be worrisome and tiring unless it's properly planned and organized," said Sarah Fountain, home furnishings specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Fountain says young people move very often, especially after graduation for first jobs, promotions and job transfers.

"The overwhelming task of moving bewilders many young movers," she said. "But certain procedures can make the transition easier."

First, decide on a moving date. It's best to avoid the end or beginning of the month since these are the busiest times, Fountain cautioned.

Decide how you are going to move. If you use a van line or rent equipment, reserve your date well in advance, she added.

"After these decisions are made, begin packing unless a moving company will do it for you," Fountain said. "As you pack, dispose of things you don't need, like old toys or clothes. Decide how you will arrange furniture, then tag or code the furniture for each room at your new residence."

Notify others of your move. Inform your employer, fire and household insurance companies, and the post office of your change of address.

"It's important that you get new insurance policies for your new residence," Fountain said. "Also, the post office has free cards you can mail to magazines, stores and others informing them of your new address."

"Transfer any records that will be needed at your new residence," Fountain said. "If there are school-age children in the family, forward school records. Ask your doctor for copies of prescriptions that need to be transferred."

Other services may be transferred or cancelled. Some of these include telephone, gas and electric services; newspaper deliveries; and bank, department store, finance company and service station accounts.

"When cancelling service, he agrees, the service is performed in the hospital outpatient department or free-standing facility in the morning and the patient leaves later that day, recovering at home.

Most insurance companies offer coverage for ambulatory surgery and many suggest this type of plan will gain wider acceptance as the number of ambulatory facilities increases across the country.

Consumer awareness and strong support from organizations such as the ACS will also produce a greater willingness on the part of the attending physician to choose an ambulatory procedure.

With the nation's health care bill expected to reach $320 billion this year, ambulatory surgery is a plausible alternative to hospitalization in many cases.

In addition, ambulatory charges were 55 percent lower than charges for hospital inpatients," the journal said.
